

NIGMS RISE PROGRAM @ FIU

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF GENERAL MEDICAL SCIENCES ~ RESEARCH INITIATIVE FOR SCIENTIFIC ENHANCEMENT

FLORIDA INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY NIGMS RISE PROGRAM

INFORMATION

The FIU NIGMS RISE Program exists for the purpose of advancing research training in the biomedical sciences; it provides graduate and undergraduate students compensation for a yearlong work obligation in a laboratory conducting biomedical research. Sponsored by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) - National Institute of General Medical Sciences (NIGMS), we are dedicated to increasing the number of undergraduate and graduate students from underrepresented groups in biomedical and behavioral research. It is designed to support academic success in the sciences, provide research training for graduate students matriculating at the college and assist undergraduate students enter into and successfully complete M.D./Ph.D. or Ph.D. programs.

Research travel funds are available for FIU NIGMS RISE students to attend scientific meetings & conferences each year. The program also provides $12 per hour to undergraduates, a $25,000 contract and annual tuition-waiver for graduate students. Other training include: research laboratory training, Responsible Conduct of Research as well as professional development workshops.

Undergraduate students may apply during their freshman, sophomore or junior years for participation in the program through their senior year. Graduate students may apply at any point during their graduate program, even before being accepted at FIU; however, if offered a position, must enroll as a full-time student.
